Restriction

Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-14, drawn to a DNA vaccine comprising a naked DNA encoding an antigenic polypeptide and one adjuvant compound which is the polymers of acrylic or methacrylic acid, classifiable in class 514, subclass 44.
- II. Claims 1-14, a DNA vaccine comprising a naked DNA encoding an antigenic polypeptide and one adjuvant compound which is the copolymers of maleic anhydride and alkenyl derivative, classifiable in class 424, subclass 486.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Although there are no provisions under the section for "Relationship of Inventions" in MPEP 806.05 for inventive groups that are directed to different methods, restriction is deemed to be proper because these methods appear to constitute patentably distinct inventions for the following reasons:

1/ As set forth in MPEP 803.02 unity of invention for exists if all species recited in a claim (1) shows a common utility, and (2) share a substantial structural feature disclosed as being essential to that utility. Claims 1 and 10 do not have unity of invention because the polymers of acrylic or methacrylic acid and the copolymers of maleic anhydride and alkenyl derivative do not share any substantially common structure with one another. As a result of the lack of the substantially common structure shared by the respective groups, a search of those from Group I would not necessarily overlap with that of Group II.

Should Group I or Group II be elected, the claims of the respective group are generic to a plurality of disclosed patentably distinct species comprising:

- allyl sucrose; and

- Allypentaerythritol.

Applicant is further required under 35 U.S.C. 121 to elect a single disclosed species as listed above and cited in the claims, even though this requirement is traversed.

Should applicant traverse on the ground that the species are not patentably distinct, applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case. In either instance, if the examiner finds one of the inventions unpatentable over the prior art, the evidence or admission may be used in a rejection under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) of the other invention.

Should Groups I or II be elected, and one of the species cited above be elected, the claims are generic to a plurality of disclosed patentably distinct species comprising:

A specific named pathogen as listed in claim 9, wherein the specific compound must be a member of the elected group.

Applicant is further required under 35 U.S.C. 121 to elect a single disclosed species of the specifically named pathogen as listed in the claims, even though this requirement is traversed.

Should applicant traverse on the ground that the species are not patentably distinct, applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case. In either instance, if the examiner finds one of the inventions unpatentable over the prior art, the evidence or admission may be used in a rejection under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) of the other invention.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their divergent subject matter, fall into different statutory classes of invention, and are separately classified and searched, and because a search of all of all of the species would have been undue, an undue burden to examine for patentability is required, and therefore, the restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper..
